Report on Jail Visit Organised on the Occasion of Human Rights Day

Date: Saturday, 10th December 2022

Venue: Sasaram Central Jail

Organised by: Narayan School of Law, Gopal Narayan Singh University

Theme: "Dignity, Freedom and Justice for All"

The Narayan School of Law organised an educational and awareness visit to the Sasaram Central Jail on Saturday, 10th December 2022, to mark the celebration of Human Rights Day. The visit was conducted under the theme "Dignity, Freedom and Justice for All," reflecting the universal principles of equality and human rights.

A group of 38 students from the Narayan School of Law participated in the visit. The programme was co-ordinated by Mr. Simal Kr. Singh, Assistant Professor, while Dr. Sangeeta Kumari, Dr. Narmada Singh, and Mrs. Anjali Singh, Assistant Professors, accompanied and guided the students throughout the visit.

The primary objective of the visit was to provide law students with practical exposure to the functioning of the prison system and to sensitize them to the importance of protecting the rights and dignity of inmates. During the visit, students interacted with jail authorities, observed the living conditions, rehabilitation initiatives, and educational and vocational programmes undertaken for prisoners.

The interaction with prison officials helped the students understand the legal and administrative framework governing prisons, the challenges faced by inmates, and the measures taken to uphold their fundamental human rights.

The visit proved to be an insightful and educational experience for all participants, fostering empathy and awareness about the real-world application of human rights principles. The initiative was highly appreciated by the Director of Narayan School of Law, Prof. (Dr.) Rakesh Verma, who emphasized that such visits play a vital role in shaping socially responsible and empathetic legal professionals.

The programme concluded with a note of gratitude to the Sasaram Central Jail authorities for their cooperation and to the faculty members for their guidance and support.

The interactions between the participants and the facilitator helped to highlight the issues that farmers face, their root causes, and knowledge gaps. Through exchange of field-based expertise, knowledge, and experiences from research and practices in different parts of the country and the world, the interaction also assisted in identifying potential solutions to the existing and emerging problems of soil degradation. In doing so, the facilitator emphasized the need of determining the type of soil and the fertility status of the soil, including its pH, prior to the soil treatment procedure and how compost replenishes depleted soil.

Session-2

The session was practical session with an exhibition and demonstration of making compost by passive aerobic compost with inputs involving cattle dung, rice straw, food waste, lawn cuttings, starter nutrients and water at the experimental field of NIAS, GNSU. It involved observation and demonstration on the preparation of compost. The practical session aimed to provide participants on exposure to composting activities and capacity building so that the process could be replicated independently. In addition to participation, the training ended with an evaluation of the training from the perspective of the participants and a short message from the research team and the teacher, who encouraged the participants to take advantage of skill-building opportunities and contact experts in problem situations.
