Report on Yoga Session Organised on the Occasion of the 8th International Day of Yoga

The Narayan School of Law, Gopal Narayan Singh University, organised a Yoga Session to commemorate the 8th International Day of Yoga with great enthusiasm and participation. The programme commenced on 1st June 2022, with daily yoga sessions conducted every morning from 7:00 AM to 8:00 AM at the university campus.

The sessions were guided and conducted by Dr. Gyan Chand Yadav and Dr. Sanjai Kr. Singh, who served as Yoga Teachers throughout the programme. Under their expert supervision, participants practiced various asanas, pranayama, and meditation techniques that promote physical, mental, and spiritual well-being.

The final yoga session organised on 21st June 2022 in which a total of 150 students from the Narayan School of Law and 59 students from different faculties of Gopal Narayan Singh University enthusiastically participated in the sessions. The event aimed to create awareness about the importance of yoga in maintaining a healthy lifestyle and to inspire students and faculty members to adopt yoga as part of their daily routine.

The Director of the Narayan School of Law, Prof. (Dr.) Rakesh Verma, appreciated the initiative and encouraged everyone to make yoga a regular practice for holistic development. He highlighted that yoga is not merely a physical exercise but a way of achieving harmony between mind and body.

The programme concluded with a collective meditation session and an expression of gratitude to the yoga instructors and participants. The event successfully reflected the global theme of International Yoga Day — “Yoga for Humanity” — and reinforced the importance of wellness and mindfulness in daily life.

Report: Role of electrolytes in Anaesthesia

Date of Programme: 18/10/2022 (Tuesday)

Time: 2.00 PM – 4.00 PM

Venue: LT 2

Overview:

NPIAS organized a guest lecture on role of electrolytes in anesthesia in MBBS LT-2. Through the lecture we came to know about the importance of anesthesia as electrolytes are crucial in anaesthesia because their balance is essential for normal physiological functions, and imbalances can cause serious complications like cardiac arrhythmias, muscle weakness, and neurological issues. Anaesthesiologists maintain electrolyte balance through careful pre-operative assessment and intraoperative management, including intravenous fluid administration, to address deficits caused by fasting, blood loss, or underlying disease. Monitoring and correcting electrolyte abnormalities before and during anaesthesia is vital for a successful outcome.

Resource Person:

Dr. Vivek Sinha

Professor & HOD, Biochemistry

NMCH, Jamuhar, Bihar

Active Participants:

All student of NPIAS

Teaching faculties of NPIAS

Conclusion:

The role of electrolytes in anaesthesia is critical for maintaining physiological stability, preventing complications, and ensuring patient safety throughout the perioperative period. Proper management of fluid and electrolytes is paramount because imbalances can significantly alter cardiovascular, neurological, and neuromuscular functions, potentially leading to fatal consequences.

Report: Workshop of Bachelor of Operation Theatre Technology

Topic: Oxygen Therapy

Date: 18/10/2022

Time: 10.00 AM – 11.00 AM

Venue: LT - 2

Resource Person: 1. Mr. Gajendra Singh (Assistant Professor)

Mangalayatan University, Aligarh, Uttar Pradesh

2. Dr. Pankaj Kumar (MD)

Anaesthesiologist, Fortis Hospital, Chandigarh

Mode: Online

Coordinator: Department of Operation Theatre Technology

Aim: The aim of organizing oxygen therapy in the operation theatre is to ensure safe, efficient, and continuous delivery of oxygen to patients during surgical procedures, supporting vital functions and preventing hypoxia.

Aims of Oxygen Therapy in the Operation Theatre

- Maintain adequate oxygenation: Surgical procedures, especially under anaesthesia, can depress respiratory function. Oxygen therapy ensures that tissues and organs receive sufficient oxygen.
- Prevent hypoxia: Hypoxia can lead to serious complications including brain damage, cardiac arrest, and death. Oxygen therapy mitigates this risk.
- Support anaesthesia and ventilation: Most anaesthetic agents depress respiration. Oxygen is essential for mechanical ventilation and maintaining respiratory stability.
- Assist in emergency resuscitation: In cases of cardiac or respiratory arrest, immediate oxygen delivery is critical for resuscitation efforts.
- Enhance patient safety: A well-organized oxygen supply system ensures uninterrupted oxygen flow, reducing risks during surgery.
- Enable specialized procedures: Surgeries like thoracic or neurosurgery may require controlled oxygen environments or hyperoxia

Some of the important topics discussed in the workshop are as follows:

1. Indications for Oxygen Therapy

- Hypoxemia and hypoxia
- Respiratory distress or failure
- Postoperative recovery

Coordinator
IQAC (NAAC)
Gopal Narayan Singh University
Jamuahar, Sasaram, Rohtas (Bihar)

- Anaesthesia support
- Acute and chronic lung diseases (e.g., COPD, pneumonia)

2. Methods of Oxygen Delivery

- Nasal cannula
- Simple face mask
- Venturi mask
- Non-rebreather mask
- High-flow nasal cannula (HFNC)
- Mechanical ventilation

3. Equipment and Setup

- Oxygen sources: cylinders, concentrators, central pipeline systems
- Flow meters and humidifiers
- Safety checks and maintenance protocols

4. Monitoring and Assessment

- Pulse oximetry (SpO_2)
- Arterial blood gases (ABG)
- Signs of oxygen toxicity or CO_2 retention

5. Complications and Risks

- Oxygen toxicity
- Fire hazards in oxygen-rich environments
- Dry mucous membranes or nasal irritation
- Hypercapnia in COPD patients

6. Guidelines and Protocols

- WHO and hospital-specific oxygen therapy protocols
- Target oxygen saturation levels
- Titration and weaning strategies

7. Special Considerations

- Paediatric and neonatal oxygen therapy
- Oxygen use in anaesthesia and critical care
- Ethical considerations in end-of-life care

Conclusion: As we conclude this workshop on oxygen therapy, we reflect on the vital role oxygen plays in sustaining life and supporting clinical care. Through today's sessions, we've deepened our understanding of the principles, delivery methods, monitoring techniques, and safety protocols essential for effective oxygen administration.

We've explored not only the science behind oxygen therapy but also its practical applications in diverse healthcare settings—from emergency rooms to operation theatres and intensive care units. The discussions on complications, ethical considerations, and patient-centric approaches have equipped us to deliver safer and more compassionate care.

Let this workshop serve as a stepping stone toward improved clinical practice, enhanced patient outcomes, and continued professional growth. May we carry forward the knowledge gained today and apply it with diligence, empathy, and excellence.
